

Newcastle MORNING PHOTOS

☀ Newcastle Morning Photos are images taken by everyday Novocastrians of everyday Newcastle. They are the waking moments of this city, the morning routines of its inhabitants, surprise moments captured as the senses stretch awake.

It's different perspectives of well-known landmarks or otherwise inconsequential landscapes that are quintessentially part of our way of life. Individually they represent one person's unique Newcastle moment. Together they encapsulate the diversity and idiosyncratic nature of living in this one-of-a-kind city.

The project was originally formed on Twitter under the hashtag #newcastle morningphoto in August 2010 by 1233 ABC Newcastle's afternoon presenter Carol Duncan who encouraged listeners and Twitter followers to take a quick photo of their morning, no matter where in the Newcastle and Hunter Valley region they may be, and share them with others via Twitter. A Newcastle Morning Photo Flickr group was set up shortly thereafter by The Novocastrian Files editor Siobhan Curran as a way of permanently capturing many of the photos that were streaming through.

Many thanks to Carol Duncan for sharing her idea; Siobhan Curran for co-ordinating the exhibition; Pro Am for printing the photos; Lion Studio for mounting the photos; and all the Renew Volunteers for staffing the exhibition.

A note from Renew Newcastle

Renew Newcastle provides artists, cultural projects and community groups with the opportunity to use and maintain CBD buildings until they become commercially viable or are redeveloped, bringing life into the city in the meantime. Since January 2009 Renew Newcastle has opened up more than 30 empty properties in the city, and seeded more than 60 local creative initiatives. Working with the NSW Government to open up otherwise unused spaces at Nobbys Head is part of our ongoing interest in encouraging creative use of empty space to reinvigorate community and visitor interest in Newcastle's exceptional landscape, built environment and culture. The Newcastle Morning Photos exhibition is a product of that same passion for Newcastle and the unique moments it unfolds for us everyday.
